

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to digital audio coding systems that employ high frequency reconstruction (HFR) methods. It teaches how to improve the overall performance of such systems, by means of an adaption over time of the crossover frequency between the lowband coded by a core codec, and the highband coded by an HFR system. Different methods of establishing the instantaneous optimum choice of crossover frequency are introduced.

09087557 111501